Agricultural Land Is Classified By Usage Categories

- Dry Land: Cultivated land which does not have the benefit of irrigation to enhance crop production.
- Irrigated Land: Land which utilizes the application of water in order to enhance crop production.
- Native Grass: Range or pasture land, including unplowed pasture, made up of plants that are part of an area's original environment.
- Tame Grass: Range or pasture land made up of introduced plant species that could receive periodic cultural treatment such as fertilization or mowing. Grass waterways, within the boundaries of cropland, where the topography is such that the land can be hayed, should be identified as tame grass.
- Waste Land: Waste Land: Waste is only appropriate within the classification of land devoted to agricultural use. Waste acreage will be listed under Native Grass. The agricultural use type of Waste is appropriate for areas with a minimum of three acres that meet the following criteria.
1. Areas within the boundaries of cropland that will physically not allow the cultivation of crops.
 2. Typically small areas where the soil will not produce crops or other native vegetation.
